Grandma visits Spring Garden Fair

URL · desktop and mobile · Goal: buy a ticket (my guess)

SCORE	BIGGEST PROBLEM
6/10	⛔ Buttons: the only big button says "Explore", not "buy"

Oh honey, I put my glasses on and had a good look. The flowers are lovely, but I almost missed how to get a ticket.

Where I hesitated

⛔ Buttons: The only big orange button says "Explore". I wanted to buy a ticket, not explore.
→ Fix: Rename the button to say what it does.

⛔ Finding it: I wanted to know the price. I read about 380 words about the history of the garden before I found it near the bottom. Reading effort ●●●○ Too much to read.
→ Fix: Put the price near the top, next to the date.

⛔ Forms: The email box only has gray hint text inside it, "Email". When I started typing, the hint disappeared and I forgot what the box was for.
→ Fix: Add a visible label above each box.

⚠️ Easy to read: The intro text is light gray on white, so it's hard to read (1.9:1, should be at least 4.5:1). I had to lean in, dear.
→ Fix: Use a darker gray for the body text.

⚠️ Bold text: Only "12 May" is bold. Where is it, and how much does it cost?
→ Fix: Make the place and price bold too.

✅ What I liked

- First look: I knew right away it was a garden fair, and it loaded fast.
- Headlines: They told me what, when, and who it's for.

Here's what my friend Jerry suggests

Usability check: Spring Garden Fair
Score: 6/10 | Checked: example.com/spring-fair, desktop and mobile

What to change (most important first):
1. Rename the main button. "Explore" does not say you can buy tickets here. Before: "Explore" After: "Get your ticket"
2. Move the price up to the first screen, next to the date. A reader has to get through about 380 words before finding it.
3. Add visible labels to the form fields. Hint text inside the box disappears when typing. Before: hint "Email" After: label "Your email address"
4. Darken the intro text. Light gray on white is hard to read (1.9:1, should be at least 4.5:1).
5. Bold the place and price, not only the date. Skimmers read bold text first.

Good to know:
- The goal (buy a ticket) was assumed.
